An unorthodox boss resume:

I am gregarious.

I inspire and manage long term development.

I am fairminded.

I write well enough, and enjoy it.

I have been in business in a small way for a decade, Wellington Woodworks represents my current capabilities and capacity.

I've got two sons, one is at University and the other starts primary school in a year or so.

I endeavour to lead a well integrated life, focus on family, friends and our wider community over the long term and work in a manner which reflects this aim.

I am concerned with physical, intuitive, psychological and emotional wellbeing.

I have a host of initiatives and concerns which I progress in concert. I work reasonably well most of the time and brilliantly when the occasion warrants it.

As a rock climber, an immigrant, a woodworker and a businessperson / entrepreneur, I live a life of informed risk. Hence I entrust this somewhat unorthodox and reasonably bold resume, (which my partner says would make most recruitment consultants "throw up their hands in horror,") to you.

Some of the things I've done and places I've worked include:

As a lad in Yorkshire:

Outdoor Gear.

Shopkeeper.

Curlew Café.

Dogs body.

Prince Henry's Grammar School.

Head Boy.

Community Volunteers.

Volunteer.

As a young man:
